of an editorial in the Hartford Times which discusses present conditions and the future. Would that the optimism of Norwich business man might prove contagious it says: R. C. Plaut, president of the Plaut-Cadden com-pany of that city, reviewing war conditions abroad and peace conditions here, and keeping in mind the proven theory that "war or conflict destroys what has been produced and prowhat has been produced and produces nothing useful," expresses the opinion that in the near future "un certainty in this county will changed to certainty money will be released and manufacturing will go on as never before. Every dolar," he continues, "every square foot of ground, every brain, every hand, every wheel, every ship and every railroad will find that it has not only all it will find that it has not only all to can do, but more than it can do, to take care of what is in reality right now knocking at our door." This view corresponds singularly well with that obtained by Henry J. Wylle, secretary of the Hotchkiss Wylie secretary of the Hotchkiss Brothers company of Torrington, from Dun's Review. It is reported by the Torrington Register that in response to the request of Mr. Wylle for an expert opinion upon the business out-look, the Review wrote him under date of August 17, in part, as follows: The consensus of opinion is that the elimination of foreign competition will ompel our mills and factories to sur ply the vast quantities of merchan-dise that ordinarily would come from abroad. A great increase in our trade with South America and other coun-tries is also anticipated, and the betries is also anticipated, and the belief is growing that in the very near future our manufacturers will be taxed to meet the demand placed upon them.

The settlement of the freight rate case, the organization of the federal reserve board, the prompt action of the secretary of the treasury in providing the banks with emergency funds and the passing of the shipping bill by congress are all regarded as bill by congress are all regarded as factors tending to restore confidence and the effect is already seen in renewed mercantile activity in several directions. • • • Taking the outlook iltogether, there is every reason to look forward to exceptionally prosper-ous conditions after a short period o preparation. Apparently there are business men among us who believe with President Wilson that the biggest thing Americans can do for their country is to keep out of the European muddle, and with cool calm judgment avoid talking war and politics and talk business, keeping alert with a view to creating it as opportunity offers Hartford Times. NORWICH TOWN
